Haiti

Located about 700 miles from the coast of Florida, Haiti is the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere. Haiti has been plagued by political violence and instability for much of the nation's history. While the physical, social, and financial needs are overwhelming in the nation, still the greatest barrier for the people of Haiti is spiritual. Haiti is said to be "80% Catholic, but 100% voodoo." Mixing Christianity with voodoo or other forms of animism is a practice held by many.

In the ongoing aftermath of recent natural disasters and a continued downward turned economy, the people of Haiti are often labeled by outsiders as without hope. This sense of hopelessness permeates the culture. While international aid and relief efforts are at an all time high, we believe the only true hope for Haiti lies in spiritual transformation.
